01 MY PRIORITIES

The VALUES guiding my next chapter, and why they matter.

The values I want guiding my next chapter are service, compassion, and leadership. These matter to me because I don't just want to check boxes or finish tasks — I want to know I actually helped someone get somewhere. Service means everything I do is for other people, every day. Compassion means meeting people where they're at. Leadership means getting myself and everyone around me moving toward something worth reaching. Together, they're what I want running my life, not just fitting around it.

02 MY CONDITIONS FOR FIT

What support for those VALUES looks like in a real opportunity.

My value of service would be supported where every task connects to helping someone move forward. My value of compassion would be supported through real relationships with people who need support. I'd recognize it by people actually believing in what we're doing, not just saying so.

03 MY DECISION PRINCIPLES

What I will protect, where I can be flexible, and what my choice must account for.

I will prioritize work built around serving people and protecting my own health, because I've seen what happens when I skip that to push harder. I need an opportunity that lets my work actually help someone move forward. I can be flexible about when and where I work. Before deciding, I will find out whether it lines up with my values, whether I can sustain it long-term, and whether it actually matches who I am.

MY COMPASS CHECK

HOW I WILL CHOOSE

I will prioritize service, compassion, and leadership. I'm looking for a setting where the work actually helps people move forward. I want to protect my health and family, and I can be flexible on when and where I work. Before I choose, I need to know it fits my values, is sustainable, and matches who I am.

MY NEXT STEP

When I'm looking at a next opportunity, I will find out whether it actually lines up with my values, whether I can sustain it long-term, and whether it fits who I am.
